

5th Lunch Seminar 26.09.13

12.00-13.15 Kristine Bonnevis House, Blindern – Auditorium 2

Life after PhD - Where do people work?

The PhD-forum at the Department of Biosciences in collaboration with Biostruct invites to an autumn seminar-series about life after the PhD. People that have taken a PhD in life science, and now work outside of academia come and tell about their experience. What have they done after the PhD, where do they work, and how did they end up there? What kind of skills apart from the scientific background has been valuable to them?

Program:

12.00 - 12:15 Welcome - coffee and cake

12.15 - 12.45 Talk by Christian Berger
- TEVA

12.45 - 13.15 Talk by Line Johnsen
- Aker BioMarine Antarctic

Christian Berger has his PhD from the Department of Pathology Rikshospitalet, under the supervision of Helen Madshus. Today Christian is working for TEVA, one of the world leading pharmaceutical industries with 46 000 employees.

Line Johnsen has her PhD from the Department of Molecular Biosciences and worked as a post doc in the Norwegian Radium hospital. Today she is working as a director for regulatory affairs at Aker BioMarine Antarctic.

The talk is open for all interested participants, and we encourage master students to come. Coffee and cakes will be served from 12.00.
